SUSTAINABILITY AND THE CIRCULAR ECONOMY

RESPONSIBLY MANAGING OUR ENVIRONMENTAL FOOTPRINT

Reinforcing our environmental credentials by taking appropriate steps to responsibly manage climate change is a primary area of focus of our sustainability strategy.

- 83.4% reduction in absolute greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions (scope 1 and 2) since 2000
- New commitment: reduce scope 1 and 2 GHG emissions by 30% against 2015 levels by 2025
- 75% of energy requirements (electricity and fuel) come from renewable sources, such as carbon-neutral biomass and hydroelectricity

ENSURING THE SUSTAINABILITY OF THE FORESTS IN OUR CARE

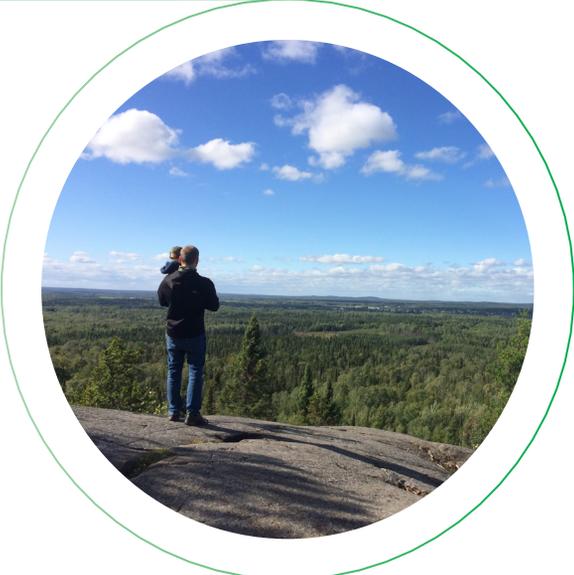

The forest products sector demonstrates the circular economy in action, beginning with its primary input: fiber, a renewable, natural resource. The regeneration of harvested woodlands is an essential component of responsible and sustainable forest management. We rely on various forest management techniques and best practices, including regeneration surveys, site preparation, planting of seedlings and seeding – all in combination with natural regeneration.

- 100% of forests regenerated naturally or by tree planting
- 100% of managed forests certified to internationally recognized standards
- Maintained internationally recognized chain of custody (CoC) certification at 100% of certified facilities; completed multisite CoC certification at all tissue mills

INNOVATION – DEVELOPING BIOMATERIALS

We are building a commercial cellulose filament plant at our Kénogami (Quebec) paper mill, with production start-up planned for 2022. Cellulose filaments are a new, sustainable biomaterial made from wood fiber manufactured entirely from renewable sources. Integrating these fibers into commercial and everyday products results in lighter-weight, more fuel-efficient vehicles, more resilient coatings and higher performance concrete.

The thermomechanical pulp biorefinery at our Thunder Bay (Ontario) pulp and paper mill focuses on developing new ways to efficiently produce and commercialize innovative bioproducts derived from wood.
